Study will determine location of 30 beds

Hospitals and Hyland Crest are involved

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

There will be a new study to determine the future of the two local hospitals, Hyland Crest seniors' home and the location of Haliburton County's 30 new long-term care beds.

At a meeting in Dorset last Tuesday, the Haliburton County Development and Planning Committee agreed that the issues surrounding the county's two hospitals, the seniors' home and long-term care should all be tied together under one study.

This study, which should be under way by the end of the summer, will be a joint project of county council, St. Joseph's Hospital and the development and planning committee.

The mandate of the committee, which has met six times since its inaugural meeting May 12, is to implement the recommendations of the Directional Plan for the county's long-term health, housing and social service needs which was completed a year ago.

The 13-member committee is chaired by Times publisher Jack Brezina and includes municipal politicians, health care and social service workers, residents and provincial officials.

Its first two priorities are to determine the best locations for the 30 new beds which the province approved for Haliburton County last year and to oversee a study of Hyland Crest and Minden Hospital.

Last Tuesday was the first time a committee meeting was open to the public. The first six meetings were used to give members an overview of the issues involved.

In his opening statement, Brezina said he is aware that some members are frustrated with the seemingly slow progress so far, but he said the pace of the committee's work will quicken as it begins to make decisions.

The committee broke into two groups to discuss the feasibility study and how to allocate money and beds throughout the county.

The province has committed $2.3 million in capital funding, but the community must contribute one-third of any money spent.

The county has already set aside $266,000, which was supposed to have been used for the 18-bed chronic care addition to the Haliburton Hospital. That money can be used to cover the community's cost of establishing the long-term beds.

The public money raised for the 18-bed addition has now grown to more than $600,000, which is being held in trust by the St. Joseph's Hospital Foundation.

It is unclear whether that money can be used by the committee or not. The committee is planning to meet with the executive director of the foundation this week to find out the status of the money raised by the community.

The discussion on where to locate the beds generated some debate among committee members.

Doug Campbell put forward a proposal that the committee agree, in principle, that the

Minden asked to keep ambulance operations

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

The Ministry of Health has asked Minden council to retain control of the Haliburton County Ambulance Service for the next two months.

In May, council gave the ministry 90 days notice that it wanted out of the ambulance business, and this Friday was supposed to have been the date to complete the transfer.

But last week the ministry contacted the municipality and asked that it retain control during an interim period so issues arising from the transfer can be resolved.

During last Thursday's council meeting, Reeve Bern Berry hinted at further developments in the negotiations telling councillors he had "surprising news" about the ambulance service.

Details were not revealed however and council discussed the issue in a closed session after the regular council meeting ended.

The on-going negotiations also involve the ambulance employees who are represented by the Ontario Public Service Employees Union.

In an interview on Saturday, union spokesman Ian Douglas called meetings last week with the ministry productive, but would not discuss details.

"We're back discussing a possible solution with the ministry," he said. "We want the best solution for all concerned."

Minden council decided to divest itself of the service because councillors felt ministry funding, which is supposed to cover the entire cost of running the service, did not compensate the township for the time and effort spent on administering the service.

Because the service covers all of Haliburton County, it was felt that Minden taxpayers should not be subsidizing the cost of operating the service.

Reeve Bern Berry approached the county's management committee about taking over the service, but the committee did not accept the offer.

In the weeks following council's an-

Ministry approval still needed for study of Minden Hospital

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

The ministry of health has not yet answered the request from St. Joseph's Hospital to cover the deficits of the Haliburton and Minden Hospitals for the next two years.

This Friday is the deadline imposed by the St. Joseph's board of trustees to get a positive answer from the ministry before taking "drastic action."

In June the hospital announced that the combined operating deficits of the Minden and Haliburton Hospitals would total $175,000 and it would be unable to cover that amount.

It submitted a proposal to have the province cover the deficits for a two year grace period while the amalgamation of the Minden Hospital and Hyland Crest seniors' home is pursued.

Last week, St. Joseph's executive director Frank Lussing said the ministry had not yet responded to the hospital's request except to say they would be back to him about it.

Lussing met with the Haliburton County Planning and Development Committee to discuss the situation and there is an agreement to undertake a joint feasibility study of Hyland Crest and Minden Hospital. The county, which owns the seniors' home, is also going to be asked to participate.

Work has already begun on drafting a request for proposals from consultants interested in doing the feasibility study.

At a meeting of the Twelve Mile Lake and Little Boshkung Property Owners Association on Saturday, Minden Reeve Bern Berry said he believes its possible the Minden Hospital might be closed.

"I feel if the ministry doesn't say okay, I think we are in danger of losing our little hospital in Minden," he said. He encouraged residents to lobby the ministry on behalf of the hospital.

"It might help if you sent a letter to the ministry of health explaining to them how valuable the hospital is," said Berry. "I would appreciate it if you took pen in hand."

The Times will publish next Tuesday

Monday, August 3 is a civic holiday throughout much of Ontario and as a result we will publish a day later next week. The Times will be delivered to stores and post offices on Tuesday morning, and the office will be closed on Monday. The Thursday deadlines for advertising and copy still apply.

Summer saling

Summer is the season of yard sales, a popular pastime for many people in the Highlands. The Minden Museum Committee's sale on Saturday attracted a large crowd of bargain hunters who checked out the tables set up behind the library/cultural centre.

Brothers nabbed in drug bust

Two Minden brothers were caught trying to smuggle approximately $150,000 worth of drugs into Canada on July 12.

Constable William Brydon of the RCMP Drug Enforcement Unit at Pearson International Airport in Toronto says two men, one in a wheelchair, arrived on an Air Canada flight from Jamaica Sunday, July 12.

At Customs they were checked and Brydon says there were some suspicions about the pair and so the wheelchair was searched.

Six kilograms of cannabis resin worth about $120,000 on the street and one and a half kilograms of hash worth $30,000 were found hidden in the wheelchair's battery case.

The pair have already appeared in a Brampton court with the younger man released and the older man released on bail.

Charged with importing drugs are Brett Porter, 28, and Joseph Porter, 22, both of Minden.

nounced intention to let the service go, the ministry dragged its feet in dealing with the transfer and attempts by council to set up a meeting with provincial officials were unsuccessful.

Finally, a ministry spokesman from Barrie met with the municipality and employees in separate meetings on July 16.

The ministry said management would be taken over by the Orillia ambulance service, which is the closest operation run by the ministry.

However, employees were told their existing contract with the municipality would be nullified and they would lose their benefits, seniority, accumulated vacation and job security, becoming unclassified employees.

Douglas says the union and ministry have been discussing the employees' concerns and it looks like a settlement will be reached that will allow staff to retain the conditions of their contract.

The ministry has asked the municipality to stay on as interim manager of the service because time ran out before the transfer could be arranged. The municipality has agreed to consider the request but has a list of conditions it wants the ministry to meet.

The only official word from the municipality came in a two-sentence press release issued Friday.

"The Townships of Anson, Hindon and Minden have been contacted by the Ministry of Health and requested to consider options for interim operations of the Haliburton County Ambulance Service," said the release. "All discussions with the Ministry of Health and OPSEU, the union for the ambulance employees, are amiable and we are anticipating a positive outcome."

Negotiations with the ministry are supposed to continue this week. Throughout the process, all sides have stressed that there will be no disruption of service as a result of the transfer of management.

number of beds should be evenly split between the villages of Minden and Haliburton.

Campbell said both villages need the beds and the even split would head off any rivalry between the two communities. If the study shows that there is a far more economical way to establish the beds which would require an unequal split, the committee would then have to revisit its decision, said Campbell.

"It's the fairest way of splitting the assets," he said. "It shows people who made contributions that these guys are doing something. If there is a reaction to a 50/50 split, we'll jolly well know about it soon enough."

However, several committee members said they did not want to commit to any proposal to split the beds between Minden and Haliburton without first knowing the results of the feasibility study.

Dysart Reeve Chris Hodgson said the committee should wait to see the outcome of the study before making any decisions. He also said the focus should be on long-term care for the entire county, not just Minden and Haliburton.

Barb Fraser agreed with Hodgson that any commitment to evenly divide the beds between the two main villages would be premature until all the facts are in.

Cliff Blair said he opposed the idea of stating the committee's intention because if the members agreed to evenly split the beds, and then were forced to back off from that decision after the study was complete, the reversal would divide the two communities.

However other members of the committee said the resolution was important because it would demonstrate to the public that the committee is making progress.

"It's a bit of PR, if you want to get right down to it," said Michael Collins. He said if the committee is planning on doing any more public fundraising, it should appear to be accomplishing something, especially since any new construction won't take place for another two years.

Campbell's resolution to split the beds evenly between the two villages was defeated by just two votes.

On the issue of the feasibility study, the committee decided to approach the county, which owns Hyland Crest, to form a task force to oversee the study.

The study will look at Hyland Crest, and the two hospitals in Minden and Haliburton, and consider acute and long-term care issues including the placement of the 30 new beds, and a possible amalgamation of Minden Hospital and Hyland Crest.

Because studies were conducted on the Haliburton Hospital in preparation for the 18-bed chronic care unit, it was decided that information would only need to be brought up to date instead of starting from square one.

Collins said the idea of merging Hyland Crest and the Minden Hospital is "obscene" because it would interfere with the quality of life of the home's residents. "I will fight that as long and as hard as I can," he said.

The other issue considered by the committee members is how to approach supportive housing.

Supportive housing is geared for seniors or people with disabilities who are still able to live independently but who require some medical or support services on site.

The members decided that the development of supportive housing projects should be left up to community groups, but the committee would like to be aware of these projects and would lend any assistance possible.

Staanworth Non-Profit Housing Corporation is currently pursuing provincial approval to build a supportive housing project in Minden. Representatives from Staانworth will be meeting with the committee to discuss the proposal.

Four injured in street brawl

Charges are still pending after a fight outside the Rockcliffe Hotel last Saturday night caused four reported injuries.

Minden police say the investigation of the fight is not over and charges could still be laid.

Witnesses say at least three men from out of town were involved in an altercation with several Minden area residents late Saturday night at the Rockcliffe.

A dispute started inside the tavern and moved outside where several small fights broke out.

Injuries included a broken nose, hemorrhaging eyes, two teeth knocked out and one man was laid unconscious after his head hit the pavement.

Tougher boating safety rules needed says jury

However, province kills licensing bill, police say speed limits costly to enforce

by Andy Holloway

A coroner's inquest jury into the death of two boaters who crashed on Lake Joseph has recommended tougher boating laws including the licensing of all motor boat operators and new speed limits.

The jury said the province should have a licensing system for all motor boat operators in place by December 31, 1992. A list of minimum requirements were recommended by the jury including the completion of an accredited boating safety course like Power Squadron or Red Cross. A written examination must also be successfully completed and the license should be renewed every three years.

Unlike automobile licenses, the minimum age would be 12-years-old. However, an adult should be on board when a licensed 12-15 year old child is driving a boat with a 25 horsepower or more motor.

Non-residents of the province could be exempt from the licensing regulations, but boating safety information should be made available at as many marinas and tourist information bureaus as well in as many other locations as possible.

However, a private member's bill which was very similar to the coroner's jury recommendation did not pass its second reading in the provincial legislature last week and is considered dead.

Bill 17 as introduced by MPP Allan McLean from Simcoe East, would have made licensing mandatory for all boats propelled by a 25 horsepower motor and would include Seadoos. There would also be an age limit set for motor boat operators.

This was McLean's second attempt to get the bill through the provincial legislature. His first attempt at boating safety legislation in 1991 died on the order papers after receiving second reading.

There has been a licensing system in place between Rouge River and Etobicoke Creek in the Toronto Harbour since 1952.

The jury also recommended new speed limits be set on provincial waterways excepting the Great Lakes.

A maximum speed limit of 80 km/h was proposed for day-time boating unless there is an organized regatta or sanctioned boat race. The jury felt that the maximum speed on most provincial highways would be a logical figure to adopt for water.

During the night, a maximum speed limit of 30 km/h would be set. There are no speed limits currently, unless otherwise posted. The jury asked that both proposals be put in place by the end of September.

However, Constable Mike Maybee of the Minden OPP who is also the area's marine enforcement officer says it would be more practical to educate the public about the dangers of speeding rather than putting speed limits up. Maybee also says that enforcing speed limits would be costly as police boats are not equipped with radar.

"I think they would be better off spending the money on enforcing education about boating safety. Education is more practical than putting in a lot of new speed limits when most boats don't even have a speedometer," says Maybee.

Maybee says an education system similar to what is available for automobiles would be a better system.

The current zone for the shoreline speed limit of 10 km/h should be increased from within 60 meters of (more on page 12)

Minden supports bail reform

Minden council is supporting a community near Sudbury which is trying to reform the system by which accused people are released on bail.

In May, the Town of Capreol passed a resolution calling on the federal government to reform the criminal justice system to ensure no one is released from jail without a bail hearing presided over by a judge. The resolution was sent to all municipalities in Ontario for support.

In a letter which accompanied the resolution, Capreol Mayor Frank Mazucca said the murders of Nina de Villiers, Karen Marquis and Kristin French, and nine-year-old Rosalyn Dupuis, all within the past year, prompted the town council's action.

The victims all had some connection to the Capreol area and Mazucca said their deaths "led to an outpouring of emotion from friends and strangers alike in the surrounding municipalities."

Capreol council's resolution says reforms are needed because a number of innocent citizens in this country lose their lives every year at the hands of violent criminals who are out on bail, and the present system does not provide sufficient safeguards and restrictions on conditional release of accused people.

In considering the request for support Minden Reeve Bern Berry, who is a retired police officer, said he had trouble with the resolution because it was beyond the mandate of the municipality.

However both Deputy Reeve Lewis Stevens and Councillor Jeanne Anthon expressed support for the request and a resolution was passed by council.

Ingoldsby by-pass proposed

County road 18 would be rerouted around hamlet

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

The county road department is proposing construction of an Ingoldsby by-pass to re-route a section of County Road 18 which runs through the hamlet.

County engineer Dave Valentine met with council at last Thursday's meeting to present the proposal.

He said the idea of an Ingoldsby by-pass had been considered once before but was dropped. Now, with the reconstruction of County Road 18 a priority on the county's road needs study, the concept has resurfaced.

At present, County Road 18 runs very close to the shore of Lake Kashagawigamog at several points. Valentine said reconstructing the road under those circumstances would be very difficult because there are places where the county only owns the travelled portion of the road, not the customary 66-foot allowance.

The proximity of the road to the lake would likely result in the destruction of some fish habitat during reconstruction, said Valentine, and the county would have to develop new habitat to replace that which is lost.

He said the estimated cost of reconstructing the existing road would be about $900,000 but a by-pass could be built for about half that amount. The reconstruction of the road will be necessary in the next two to five years.

The by-pass, which would re-route about two kilometers of County Road 18, would run inland parallel to the current road from the intersection with County Road 17 to a point near the intersection with Williams Road.

The proposed new route crosses five parcels of private property the owners of which have not yet been contacted, said Valentine.

The existing County Road 18 would be turned over to the municipality for acceptance into the township road system, if the by-pass were constructed.

While the transfer of the old roadway would result in extra expense and work for Minden's road department, Valentine said the by-pass would open up land for development which would increase the municipal tax base.

The proposed route is more than 1000 feet from the lake to avoid any possibility of development being frozen under backlot restrictions.

Reeve Bern Berry suggested that before discussion of the proposal is carried too far, council should visit the area with Valentine. The reeve said he also wants to hear from the five landowners who would be affected by the by-pass and the residents who own homes and cottages along the county road.

Given that the by-pass will reduce traffic through Ingoldsby, which will result in less noise and dust, Berry said he suspects the idea will find support among residents who live on the road. He said he wants people to write to the municipality to express their opinions of the idea.

When asked by council what the costs to the municipality would be to assume the two kilometer piece of road, Valentine said it is a fairly expensive stretch to maintain, although if the switch was made, the county would probably make some improvements like resurfacing and realigning before transferring it to Minden.

He said the idea is just in the initial stages and before the by-pass is constructed there will have to be an environmental assessment and public meetings. "We're just introducing the concept," he said.

Council decided to meet with Valentine in Ingoldsby during the first week of August to look at the current road and the proposed by-pass.

Haliburton County's planning and development committee is in danger of becoming paralysed in the face of public opinion.

The committee, which is responsible for improving the county's health, housing and social services, has just begun the process of making tough decisions which will affect long-term care delivery for the next 10 years.

But the emotionally-charged history of health care issues in Haliburton County hangs over the members like the Sword of Damocles and is interfering with a process which should be driven by logic and common sense, not knee-jerk reactions.

At last Tuesday's meeting, the first held in public, the committee spent a great deal of time concerned about fostering an appearance of accomplishment. Some members expressed the need to pass a token resolution to appease a perceived public appetite for action.

The resolution, which dealt with the division of beds between Minden and Haliburton, was only a statement of principle and did not represent a final decision, which will require the completion of a feasibility study. In the end it failed to gain the support of the majority and was defeated.

But there appears to be a problem when, after a full and productive meeting, some members insist on producing a symbolic piece of paper to wave in public.

During the course of the meeting, the members arrived at an approach for supportive housing and set the wheels in motion for a feasibility study to address the future of Haliburton County's two small hospitals, the county-run home for the aged and the placement of 30 new beds for long-term care.

Not bad for a day's work.

Surely the residents of the county realize that developing a comprehensive long-term care strategy will be a gradual process marked by steady progress and not earth-shattering announcements.

My nomination for the quote of the month goes to Donald "Busted Flush" Trump, the New York ex-tycoon who is desperately trying to resurrect his torpedoed financial empire. Trump has spent the past year or so panhandling on Wall Street, cozying up to anybody with a bulge in their hip pocket. Especially bankers. Earlier this month, Trump told a reporter he'd be back on his feet in no time. "The banks have worked with me, and I'm really proud of that."

Brilliant, Don.

Of course the banks have worked with him — Trump owes them enough money to bail out the national debt of most Third World countries. Surely he's heard the old Wall Street saying — "If you owe the bank ten thousand dollars, you've got a problem. If you owe the bank a million dollars, the bank's got a problem."

At last report, Trump was shopping around for a $2 billion, as they say, "debt restructuring".

Not that the banks are likely to throw open their vaults and see if Trump can lose it all again. In typical Bankerese understatement, a spokesman said that many in the financial community "are not comfortable" about the prospect of bankrolling Mister Trump.

Ho hum. Another high roller goes off the rails.

It hasn't been a good decade for tycoons. Robert Maxwell stepped off his yacht one night last year in the middle of Atlantic Ocean — barely ahead, it turns out, of the crash of his mighty empire. He was once one of the richest men alive — on paper, anyway. Now, his capitalist kingdom lies in shambles and his two sons have been charged with fraud and theft.

Canadian plutocrats haven't had a much easier ride. Robert Campeau, the one-time bad boy wonder from Sudbury, Ontario, continues to hide out in his Austrian mountain chateau — the last bauble remaining from his

Praise for postal workers

Editor:

I would like to send a small praise to the wonderful employees in the Minden post office.

I recently plunked a couple of overseas wedding invitations in the mail with insufficient postage and no return address (yes, yes - my own fault completely!). While the anonymous envelopes could have belonged to anyone on RR#2, they appeared back in the mailbox the very next day without any unsightly stamps, check marks or red pen all over them.

As well, I just received a letter from an old friend who was unsure of Tony's last name (of course even if he'd remembered it he was certainly unlikely to spell it correctly!). He addressed it: The Tony Family" and yet it arrived safe and sound - absolutely amazing!

In the big scheme of things these are but small wonders, but for a Toronto-cottager-turned-resident it's little things like this that make small-town living so marvelous. Thanks again!

Sincerely,
Carol Moffatt

Airing out the laundry

"How do you get your whites so white?" asked the fortyish woman to the clean shaven young man.

This old cliché sounds like it was made especially for television. Truth be told, if you own a television set you probably have seen that cliché, or something very similar, acted out on countless occasions. Chances are, you too dismissed the question as ridiculous.

But I am now a convert and it all happened because of the cliché question, "How do you get your whites so white?"

If you have never been to a laundromat, then you might not understand or appreciate the subtlety of washing your clothes in full public view.

I am referring to the Minden Laundromat, of course, but laundromats are the same the world over. All of them have caution signs about using too much soap, all have attendants who magically disappear when you get down to your last quarter and all attract an incredibly varied group of clients which makes for good people watching if you can stand a little embarrassment.

Nothing beats the sheer hilarity of a 60-year-old woman trying to hide her husband's leopard bikini briefs under a pile of non-descript white sheets. No matter what happens, you can guarantee that one of the bikini's corners will peak out of the sheets causing everyone else to stare uncomfortably away while the victim goes beet red trying to shuffle the sheets.

Being in a laundromat is like riding public transportation, most people look at the ceilings a lot or pretend to read a magazine while staring at the heaving white bulk of a washer. If you ever wondered what happened to the already outdated magazines at the dentist's office, look no further than your local laundromat, although I did get a great recipe for blueberry fudge beef-on-a-stick which I'm sure will only get better with age.

So there I am in a laundromat breathing a sigh of relief as the dryer's six minute cycle comes to an end. Taking my clothes out, mostly white socks, shirts and underwear, a woman approaches me and asks, no kidding, "How do you get your whites so white?"

I blink, uncomprehending the question, mumble something unintelligible like "Oh, they're not really that white," desperately hoping no one is watching and that she will go away.

"Do you use bleach or some special detergent?" she probes further into my dark and dirty laundromat psyche.

"Uh, no," I reply waving my hand to where my nationally advertised brand sits for all to see on one of the tables.

"Well I'm impressed, I would never let my husband do the laundry. It would be grounds for divorce," she says before moving away.

I look up and a fellow male shakes his head with a smile at me as if to say, "You sure know how to do laundry son."

Quickly I bundle my laundry up, hiding my briefs under a pile of non-descript sheets and flee from the house of terror.

Later on, watching television in my apartment I notice a subtle difference to my commercial appraisals. Yes, woman do talk about personal hygiene problems in public to strangers. Yes, teenagers loudly discuss acne pimples at the local burger shack. And yes, people do ask young men, "How do you get your whites so white?"

MVA too hot to handle

By now it should be fairly evident that Haliburton County is not going to see market value reassessment in 1993, or anytime in the foreseeable future.

Although municipal politicians, regional assessment officials and the public are going through the education process this summer, no one seems too excited by the prospect.

It's like everyone is holding their noses as they try to identify the lump of mouldy food found in the fridge just before dumping the offending item in the trash.

We'll look, but we don't want to touch.

The final decision will be made by municipal councils and county council, probably by October. They can either decide to adopt reassessment, decide to reject reassessment, or decided not to decide, which has been the preferred option exercised by councillors in the past couple of years.

This time however, politicians will not be able to use the worn out excuses of there not being enough time or information to make a thoughtful decision.

In a general sense, the concept is simple. Commercial and farm properties would benefit after reassessment with lower property taxes, a reflection of the fact that for years property taxes on those classes have been kept artificially high.

About half of residential properties would also see lower taxes under MVA. The other half, many of whom own lakefront property, are the ones who will pay for these windfalls as their own tax bills increase.

Our elected officials have the unpleasant task of judging the winners and the losers, determining which course of action is most beneficial to the overall interests of the county and voting accordingly.

What is making that process a little easier is the almost total lack of support for reassessment in the county. It's not just that the pro-MVA lobby is being drowned out by an energetic response from the opposition, or that lack of organization has prevented a coordinated campaign in favour of MVA, the fact is no one is stepping forward to embrace it.

So faced with the decision of accepting MVA, and alienating the more than 50 per cent of voters in the county who oppose reassessment, or rejecting it and facing no opposition, politicians aren't going to struggle too long with the question. And you don't have to be Jimmy the Greek to lay odds on which way the vote will go.

Analysis

by Jay Kerr-Wilson, editor

Let's face it, even the question of whether or not the educational process should proceed this summer was only passed by a slim majority of county councillors.

So assuming MVA will not be adopted, council can either reject it outright or defer the issue for yet another year, and the odds on that question are much tougher to call.

On the surface, it would seem reasonable for councillors to reject something which has no popular support and would seem to carry no lasting benefit.

But not everyone is convinced that MVA is the "wrong" approach to property taxes, they just know it's the unpopular approach.

On a strictly philosophical level, MVA sounds fair. Everyone is judged by the same yardstick, and everyone pays his way based on a process which is uniform across the county. No municipality is required to pay more than its share of county and education costs and commercial and farm properties get a break from historic inequities.

As a society, we accept that the value of the property we own is a valid factor to determine the amount of money we should contribute to local government, just as the money we earn determines income tax and the money we spend determines consumption tax.

So the question remains: If we are going to continue using property tax to pay for local and education services, what is the most equitable method of dividing the burden among property owners?

By deferring the decision for yet another year, councillors can spare themselves the fallout of actually trying to adopt MVA but, at the same time, leave the door open for adoption in the future.

Let's hope this is not the case and council makes a decision one way or another. We don't need to deal with the same debate year after year, election after election.

If adopting MVA would be "political suicide" in Haliburton County, why would we want to keep the loaded gun hanging around?

Canadian tycoons are paying the price crumbled commercial empire. In Edmonton, Peter Pocklington stickhandles his way gingerly through the encroaching fiscal forest. I wonder if he's still got any of the cash he got for Gretzky?

And Nelson Skalbania — whatever became of Nelson? It wasn't so long ago that he was Canada's version of Diamond Jim Brady — fast cars, silk suits, Lear-jetting his way to one Glitz Gala after another. Then Nelson took a short sharp and exceedingly chilly bath on the Stock Market and I haven't heard of him since.

Then there's the Reichman Brothers. One hesitates to say anything about the Reichman boys. They have a tendency to unleash platoons of lawyers bearing multi-million dollar lawsuits every time their famous surname appears in print.

So let's just say that the Reichman Brothers...appear to be having some difficulty renting all the office space they've thrown up over there on Canary Wharf in downtown London, England.

Like Mister Trump, the Messrs. Reichman have been spotted chatting with bankers about 'debt restructuring'.

Speaking as a chap who's never likely to get a banker to buy him lunch, much less float him a credit line, I can only say that I find the prospect of tycoons in turmoil a pleasant one. It's bracing to realize that the Big Guys can slip on banana peels too. Makes them appear to be "just folks".

Ernest Hemingway said it best. He was having drinks with F. Scott Fitzgerald one day. The topic rolled around to wealth.

"Of course," said F. Scott, "the rich are different from you and me."

"Yes," said Hemingway, draining off the last of his beer, "They have more money."

Recycling students

Glamorgan youths learn there's more to garbage than just trash

by Andy Holloway

Clean-up crews are a common enough sight and so you might drive by a group of students picking up road side trash in Glamorgan township this summer and not give it a second thought.

However, if you were to stop and ask these students what they were doing, you would find out there is more to their picking up other people's garbage than meets the eye.

Led by Darryl Winder, who is majoring in Human Geography at Trent University in Peterborough, these seven students are learning about the environment as well as beautifying the area through the provincial Environmental Youth Corps program.

Yes, they do pick up garbage left on or around the public township roads, but they also sort out the collected trash into recyclable and non-recyclable piles. That which can be recycled will be taken to a recycling facility in Orillia on August 21 thereby diverting garbage from township landfill sites. As well, the students will get a tour of the Orillia facility and find out how it works.

Glamorgan Reeve, Beverly MacDuff, says the jobs are part of a 10 week make work project coordinated with the Ministry of the Environment. Sherborne et al also has an EYC program, but that is run with help from the Ministry of Natural Resources.

Another difference between the two township's programs is the fact all seven students working in Glamorgan on the program are from Glamorgan. MacDuff says she had "an outpouring of students needing work this year" and received applications from as far away as Niagara Falls and Nepean, but chose to use area students unlike Sherborne.

The students take turns picking and sorting the trash, but they are also filling in charts, recording information and writing up a report to be sent to the MOE, Haliburton Steering Committee and the Recycling Council. For a small fee, any interested group or resident can also obtain a copy of the report starting September 8 at the township office.

One of the main functions of the charts says Winder, is to compare the amount of garbage collected this year against what happened two years ago, the last year Glamorgan had the EYC program. The results show some interesting trends in how different classes of residents are behaving in these environmentally conscious times.

On one cottage road the students have picked up 8 bags of trash, down from 34 in 1990. However, the reverse is true for town roads. On one town road there has been an increase from 4 bags in 1990 to 22.5 bags of trash this year. Winder says they are having to go back and redo town roads because of the amount of garbage people are throwing out.

Winder says the increase on town roads is probably due to the fact people are unaware of the garbage problem and recycling in general.

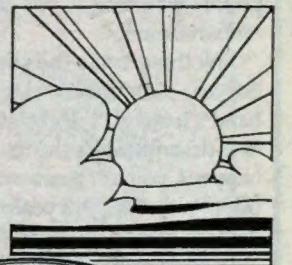

"People from the city are aware of the garbage problem because they are already (more on page 9) dealing with it. Here, there's lots of space so people think they can throw garbage anywhere and think it will be hidden by the grass," says Winder.

Winder says the group of students has found that cottagers are more interested in what the students are doing.

"Some thought we were leaving trash instead of picking it up, but once they find out what we're doing they give us the thumbs up," says Winder adding that people in town are less interested.

MacDuff says residents are not as interested as cottagers because they do not understand that the students are not just picking up the trash, but that they are recycling it too.

There is also a difference in how people use the dump sites says Winder. He says permanent residents are not aware of the benefits of recycling.

"At the dump people from in town will just throw their bag of garbage on the heap while the cottagers will come up with a box full of bottles and sort out their garbage."

As an additional project, the EYC students will be setting up a booth at the Glamorgan Horseshoe Days on August 1. There will be charts and information on what the students are doing as well as a composting machine and a pamphlet on composting prepared by EYC student, Jason Donaldson. People wishing to get a composter can write their name down and will be able to purchase one as soon as the paperwork is done says MacDuff.

Five of the seven students are high school students along with Winder and Darren Traviss, who has taken two years at Sir Sandford Fleming College. MacDuff says the skills, like organizing information, they are learning in the project can be applied in their education. As an example, Erin Pettit is doing all of the typing for the report which will improve her skills in the typing class she takes at high school.

The students were all pleased just to have a job this summer as a lot of their classmates are unemployed. Winder says he had been looking for a job since April, before he finally got this one.

"I wouldn't want to be sorting out trash for too much longer," says Donaldson adding his job is good for this summer anyway.

$800,000 in taxes owed to Minden as recession hits residents hard

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

The municipality of Anson, Hindon and Minden is owed almost $800,000 in unpaid property and business taxes.

This amount, if collected, could pay off the community centre expansion and build a new well for the village's water system.

At last Thursday's council meeting, Minden's auditor Gary Thurston told councillors the increase in unpaid taxes is a sign of the ailing economy. He encouraged the township to go after delinquent accounts.

"It's very important to manage cash and taxes receivable," he said. "There will always be a certain element among the ratepayers who use the times as an excuse not to meet their commitments."

"You have to keep in mind the municipality has to take care of itself. If that means making tough decisions, I feel those tough decisions have to be made."

The amount of unpaid taxes owed to Minden now totals 20 per cent of annual taxes collected by the municipality. As of December 31, 1991 the total amount owed had risen to $794,000, up from $509,000 the year before.

When taxes are unpaid, the municipality can run into cash flow problems unless it covers the difference with short-term bank loans or money from reserves. As of the end of 1991, the municipality had taken out temporary loans of almost $400,000 to cover cash shortages.

The process for recovering unpaid property taxes is both long and complicated and can take up to four years.

If the taxes on a piece of improved property are unpaid for a period of three years, the municipality can register the property to start the collection process. After 280 days from the date of registration, if the taxes are still unpaid, the municipality must then have the property sold and recover the money owed.

If there is any money left over after the municipality has collected unpaid taxes, interest and expenses the property owner can then apply to the courts to recover the remainder.

Improved property is property that has been built upon, or farmland. The waiting period to register vacant land is two years instead of three.

The municipality recently began the proceedings to register 32 properties for which taxes had not been paid in the last three years. Since the files were turned over to the lawyer, the taxes on half of the properties have been paid.

The registration process only applies to unpaid property taxes. In order to recover money from unpaid business taxes, the municipality has to take the business owners to court.

Businesses are charged a business tax equal to 30 per cent of their mill rate. The township starts trying to recover unpaid businesses taxes if they are unpaid for one year.

If the amount owed is less than $1,000 the township takes the business owner to small claims court. On amounts or more than $1,000 more formal legal avenues must be pursued.

Thurston was at the council meeting to present the financial report for 1991.

Except for the unpaid taxes, Thurston's report on the municipality's financial condition was positive.

While there was a slight operating deficit in the municipality's general operations, an overall surplus was generated by the various municipal boards and committees.

Council wants by-pass speed lowered

Lake association concerned about traffic safety along corridor

by Jay Kerr-Wilson

Minden council is asking the ministry of transportation to lower the speed limit on the Highway 35 by-pass and install flashing signals at the main intersections.

At last Thursday's meeting council passed a resolution to contact the ministry after considering a resolution passed by the Canning Lake Property Owners Association.

In the resolution the association recommends that caution lights be installed where the highway meets Main St. and where it meets South Lake Rd. The association further recommends that the speed limit be reduced from 80 km/h to 60 km/h from 200 yards south of the Main St. intersection to the intersection with Highway 121 to Haliburton Village.

Councillor Jerry Rome was at the Canning Lake association meeting when the issue was discussed.

He said members are worried about traffic safety along the highway given the serious accidents which have occurred in recent years. There is especially concern about the numerous business which have entrances on to the highway.

Reeve Bern Berry said Minden has asked the ministry to reduce the speed along the highway before, but the request was denied.

"Their answer has been that this is a by-pass, they are moving the traffic from point A to point B as quickly and as safely as possible, and the businesses shouldn't be there," he said.

If the transportation ministry does not grant the request, Councillor Jeanne Anthon suggested courtesy signs could be posted along the highway asking motorists to use caution when travelling the by-pass.

The Minden Community Policing Committee has also been looking into the question of traffic safety along the highway, a concern which was raised during the public meetings hosted by the committee early in the year.

The committee, in cooperation with the Minden OPP, is in the process of collecting information about the number and severity of accidents occurring on the by-pass. This information will be used to back-up a submission to the ministry.

It's Rotary Carnival time

One sure sign that we have reached the middle of the traditional summer season is upon us. This week, the Rotary Club of Minden once again hosts its annual Summer Carnival.

The Minden Arena will be the venue for this club fund-raiser, Wednesday July 29.

The evening will include the usual array of carnival rides and games of chance on the midway outside the arena, with more games of chance inside. The Rotarians will be serving up barbecue beef on a bun starting at 5 p.m. inside the arena. There will also be free ice cream for children.

While enjoying the great food, patrons will be able to watch a variety of entertainment on stage. Highland dancers will be performing at 6 p.m., Magician Steve Hepburn will perform at 7 p.m., while Johnny Toronto, the comic juggler performs at 8 p.m.

A special effort has been undertaken to make sure the children are entertained. A petting zoo and a children's reading corner will be available from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m.

The proceeds raised during the carnival will be used by the Rotary Club to support community projects.

Next week, look for another carnival, this one in Haliburton, sponsored by that community's Rotary Club.

Selling school property

Laxton reeve wants school property for a buck

by Jerry Grozelle

Four representatives from the Victoria County Board of Education were in Norland last week to meet with Laxton Councillors to explain the board's position with regard to the disposition of the Norland Public School property.

The VCBE's Superintendent of Finance Al Ingram said that the School Board must follow Ministry of Education guidelines when it disposes of any school property.

He explained that there is "Provincial equity" in the new part of the school building. He further stated that $24,500 would have to be set aside for the Ministry of Education in order for the Board to qualify for future grants, according to Ministry policy.

Ingram stated that the Board has gone through similar situations in the past and in all but one case, the school properties in question have gone up for public auction.

The VCBE's policy gives first right of refusal to the local Separate School Board, followed by post secondary education facilities, namely Sir Sandford Fleming College or Trent University. If none of those institutions are interested, the Municipality is next in line and the general public is last on the list.

"The Board would like to have the school sold at, or as close as possible, to market value," Ingram told Laxton Council.

An appraiser has set the value of the buildings at $79,000 and the land at $30,000, for a total of $109,000.

Laxton Reeve Doug Horton said that it was his hope that the Board of Education would sell the property back to the Municipality for the same amount ($1) that it acquired the school and land for.

Horton said that the buildings are in need of extensive repairs. The roof on both the original building and the addition need to be replaced and if the cost of repairs were added to the appraised value, the total could be as much as $250,000. Ingram pointed out that he and his companions didn't attend the meeting with council with the intent of making a decision. He said that any offer the Municipality might be prepared to make would have to be presented to the Board for discussion. He added that the Board would be open for offers.

Local representative on the VCBE, Dianne Austin, told council that she explained what the Municipality had in mind for the property if it was able to make the acquisition. She said that the matter was discussed at length during a closed meeting of the Board.

VCBE Vice-Chairman Alex Istchenko said that he would like to see the Municipality use the property.

"But, we have a mandate to dispose of it," he said. "We (the Board of Education) represent the County and we have a process we have to follow."

Laxton Council requested information on the operating and maintenance costs involved and asked if the Board would be willing to give the Township access to the property to have its own appraisal done.

Ingram said he didn't think there would be any problem giving the Municipality access for its own appraisal. The negotiation process will continue.

shore from the present 30 meters. If a waterway is less than 120 meters across (about 400 feet) the speed limit is 10 km/h. Bodies of water which are less than 100 meters wide, like Gull River, are not affected by the proposal.

Maybe also disagrees with this proposal and says the safety zone span of 60 meters across a body of water is good enough.

Other jury recommendations included:

- all motorized recreational watercraft carry public liability and property damage insurance by January 1, 1993

- the adoption of a points system, similar to that already in effect for motor vehicles be in place by January 1, 1993

- the adoption of a ticketing system similar to that of the Highway Traffic Act so that minor offences could be paid out of court

- full-time marine enforcement officers be made available during the boating season and that more officers be trained in marine accident reconstruction procedures (there is currently only one in the province)

- all accidents involving recreational watercraft resulting in death, personal injuries and/or damage in excess of $700 be reported to local enforcement authorities

The coroner's inquest was held after Louise Carroll-Hall and Grant Perry died as a result of injuries arising from an accident on Lake Joseph in Muskoka on Sept. 6, 1990.

The jury heard from 46 witnesses and 99 exhibits were introduced during the 10 day inquest in Barrie.

Creations in leather

Sensual material enlivens facial sculptures

by Andy Holloway

Except in the fashion world, leather is usually not considered to be much of an artistic material, but a husband and wife team from Bethany, Ontario change that opinion very quickly.

For the past 14 years, Paul and Beverly Williams have used leather to create highly visual and fascinating sculptures, or as they call them "leatherscapes," with a life-like edge. Their work, "Something's Fishy", is currently on display at the Agnes Jamieson Gallery until August 8.

Using an ancient process known as 'cuir bouilli', the leather is soaked in warm water, folded and stretched over molds or by hand and then baked in an oven. Untreated wet leather feels surprisingly soft and is very malleable.

The end result says Beverly Williams is that the smaller leather creations are stiff enough to hold up by themselves permanently. Larger works of leather have to have a wooden backing because of the weight of the material.

But the question remains, why the use of leather?

"Leather has a very sensual feel to it," says Beverly rubbing her fingers together. "It feels almost like your skin."

Beverly says the very fact the leather was once part of a living animal makes it a spiritual material to work with. She says she has been surprised by a few people who have said they did not like the use of leather for art because it comes from animals.

She dismisses this criticism saying people forget how we once used to live. Animals, she says, were considered sacred and every piece of them was used for food, clothing or in spiritual rituals.

People are becoming afraid of nature says Beverly and so they dislike the use or look of anything that comes from nature.

She cites her own daughter, who prefers store bought material to home-made because of the feeling that if it comes from a store it must be better, as an example of people turning away from nature and therefore understanding it less.

Williams says she gets much of her inspiration from ancient history and mythology. Several of the larger pieces are named after water or desert spirits. These larger pieces incorporate smooth faces, made by Paul, surrounded by rippled leather created by Beverly.

"The ripples are water flowing or the wind blowing in someone's face," says Beverly. "You get a feeling watching a sunset or looking at a rainbow and the ripples are that effect. These are the spirits in wind, water and the earth that ancient people could tap into and hear."

Not that the whole show is entirely serious. Paul has created several pieces using common terms and unusual materials. "Rock Bass" are exactly that, little fishes made from rocks. The same spirit rests in pieces such as "Cat Tails" or "Fish Sticks".

"You can do serious things all the time, but I like to do things with a little bit of whimsy to them," says Paul while giving eyelashes to his "Marlin Monroe" mask.

Sunfish, Beverly Williams, husband Paul and Marlin Monroe share the limelight at the Agnes Jamieson Gallery in "Something's Fishy."

Many of Paul's fish masks have the same sort amusing touch as his other work does. Masks like "Sunfish" will draw a smile. Paul also airbrushes shades over the finished leather art.

Often, Beverly or Paul will then adorn the masks with materials ranging from feathers to plastic bait in order to flesh out the design. A mask called "Medusa" has plastic bait worms to create coloured snakes flowing out of the evil Gorgon's head.

The largest piece is once again an environmental piece. It is a collection of lilies suspending from the ceiling with a few fish that slowly spin on their ropes as if swimming in the non-existent water. On the floor is a collection of the waste that people will often throw into our lakes and rivers. The resulting art is beautiful, but also makes one think of how man interacts with nature.

Snell sizzles to win in pitcher's powwow

by Andy Holloway

The Minden Rockcliffe Hustlers were once again stymied by the pitching of Fenelon Falls' Jeff Hutton, but this time it did not matter as the Hustlers were able to squeak out a 1-0 win last Thursday.

The difference this time for the Hustlers was pitcher Jack Snell. Despite giving up six hits and striking out just two, Snell got the outs when he needed them the most to preserve a scoreless tie.

The goose eggs were spoiled in the sixth inning when Tim Davies laid down a perfect bunt to get on base with one out. He then stole second base and scored on a wild pitch. Davies would not have scored on the wild pitch, but the ball rolled into the Hustlers' dugout giving Davies the extra base.

Hutton was in a groove, as he has been most of the season, and gave up just two hits and one walk while striking out 11 Hustlers, over half of the total he faced on the night. However, the one wild pitch cost him dearly.

Snell, on the other hand, flirted with disaster on a number of occasions particularly early on in the game. In a 1-0 win, it may seem odd that the first two innings were the key to the Hustlers success.

In the first inning Fenelon had runners on first and third base with just one out. However, Kevin Byrne was called out for leading off first base and Jeff Hutton lined out to centre field to end the inning.

Fenelon runners were again on the bases in the second inning and again were stranded. A lead-off single by Tom Jameson and a one out throwing error by Snell allowed Emerson Lowry to get on first with Jameson moving to second on the play. Jameson was then caught in a rundown when Dave Burbice could not get the ball out of the infield. On the rundown, Lowry moved to third and Burbice moved to second. However, Snell killed the rally with the first of his two strikeouts on the night.

Fenelon never really threatened to score again and the Hustlers defence came up with a number of fine fielding gems whenever Fenelon hit the ball hard. In the seventh inning both Andrew Burke and Snell made good stabs on hard hit ground balls to preserve the 1-0 win.

With the win, the Hustlers have put a solid claim on second place in the Tri-County Fastball League behind Fenelon Falls.

Earlier in the week, the Hustlers pounded Lindsay's Kent Tavern 14-7 in what was described as an "ugly" game by Lindsay's catcher/captain Mickey Conlon.

Conlon said his team's defence was bad and its pitching non-existent. The Hustlers hit three inside-the-park home runs off the Lindsay pitchers which Conlon says was an example of how bad his team's defence really was.

Ron Yake, normally the Hustler's third baseman, pitched the three innings and Greg Newell, also normally an infielder, pitched four innings.

Between now and August 10, previously rained out games will be made up. The Hustlers still have three games left, one with Bobcaygeon and two with Lindsay.

The standings as of July 25:

Fenelon	11 6
Minden	8 7
Lindsay	6 8
Bobcaygeon	6 10

New card system for hunting, fishing licenses

by Andy Holloway

Anglers and hunters will find licenses are more expensive and harder to find when new provincial regulations go into effect.

The Ministry of Natural Resources is introducing an Ontario Outdoors Card which will cost $6 for anyone seeking a license to hunt or fish. A person wanting to fish or hunt in Ontario will also have to buy the required license as always, but will not receive a paper license.

A separate card will be issued for anglers while a combination card will be sold for hunters and anglers together. Starting January 1, next year, anybody who wants a hunting or fishing license will have to have the Outdoors Card.

The Outdoors Card will look similar to credit cards says the head of fish and wildlife at Minden's MNR office, Stan Flemming. He says the ministry is responding to calls from Ontario's hunters and anglers for a more efficient system of issuing and controlling licenses.

The front of the card will identify the holder and have a validation date while the back of the card will have a magnetic stripe and space for the license renewal stickers. Once, every three years, the card will have to be renewed. The $6 fee covers the cost of creating the plastic card and the administrative costs associated with implementing the system.

The main advantage for the hunter/angler is that only one license will have to be carried at all times. Previously, a separate license was issued for different kinds of hunting. Now, several stickers can be placed on the back of one card and is all that is required.

For the MNR, the system cuts down on paper work and gives them better control over who is being issued licenses. It also ensures that only one application per person has been received for the annual deer and moose draws.

There are 1.5 million people in the province who will receive the initial application for the card. Those who do not get an application in the mail can pick one up at any MNR office.

The ministry is also freezing approval of new licensing offices in the province. Any business wishing to sell licenses which did not sell them last year will not receive permission to do so.

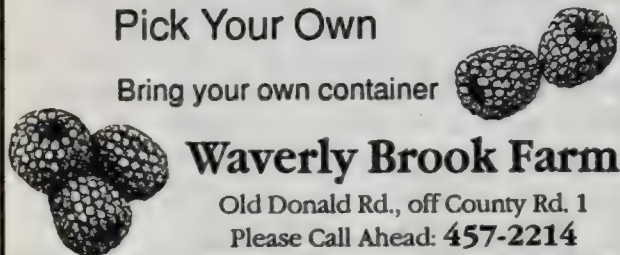

"There has been a review of the hunting and fishing licensing program in Ontario and one of the things it is looking at is the number of issuers," says Flemming. "While the review was going on, it made sense to stop creating new issuers."

Flemming says there are 41 license issuers in the Minden (more on page 16) area. Province-wide, there are 4,150 retail outlets which are able to issue MNR licenses to the public. However, an MNR report shows the top 174 issuers sell more than 40 per cent of all licenses and so the number of issuers is to be reviewed.

Flemming says the Outdoors Card and license issuers review are separate programs, but are related because the MNR is establishing a Point of Sale (POS) system to speed up the licensing procedure in 1994.

Under the POS system, each license issuer will be given a computer terminal which can verify that a person is entitled to buy a particular license.

The new procedure will also result in a speedier receipt for the MNR of monies from license issuers.

Heineken Yard honours Monk

by Andy Holloway

Minden businessmen Alan Coneybeare and Gordon Monk will be presented with the annual AMICI Heineken Yard Community Salute award on Friday.

The annual foot race, which runs this year on Friday, sponsors the award, but race spokesman Ian Sainsbury says the Community Salute is designed to honour one person for long-standing involvement in the community and does not reflect support of the race itself.

This year, two people are being honoured because last year's salute was delayed because of administrative changes.

The 1991 Community Salute goes to Minden resident Alan "Cub" Coneybeare. Coneybeare has been active for many years in the Minden Rotary and is probably best known for instituting the 'bearcub toastmaster' in his butchershop ads.

The 1992 award will go to Gordon Monk, an owner of a funeral home in Minden. He has been involved in Minden's Business Improvement Area (BIA) and events such as the Crazy River Craft Race on Gull River held earlier this month. Late this month, Monk started distributing a free booklet designed to street proof children. Monk has also been a long-time supporter of the race.

"I don't think I really did that much, a bit of directing traffic and I let them use my parking lot," says Monk, "But it's kind of nice."

Monk says people in Minden should be proud of what they have accomplished over the past year in organizing events and drawing attention to the community.

Previous winners of the salute include: the community and council of Anson, Hindon and Minden, the Rockcliffe Hotel and Dave Willis, Onondaga Camp, Minden OPP and the Minden Ambulance Service.

The awards ceremony will take place at the Rockcliffe Hotel following the race.

Community Salute winner for 1992, Gord Monk

Councillor takes class in municipal politics

by Jerry Grozelle

Lynn Peel has been doing some juggling the last several months. She has been doing her full-time job helping husband Chris Bullerdick run Norland Aircraft Services; she has been serving as a councillor for the United Townships of Laxton, Digby and Longford; and she has been working on a Municipal Councillor's course, a community college credit course offered through the Centre for Government Education and Training at St. Lawrence College in Kingston.

Peel recently received her diploma, graduating with a 90 per cent average. The Municipal Councillor's course is a six-month correspondence course, from January to June, that is divided into six sections. She wrote her final exam at the Laxton Municipal Office recently.

"It's a very involved course," Peel said. "It takes a lot of discipline to complete it."

Peel often found it difficult to juggle her job, her responsibilities on council and her homework. But, in the end, she's glad she took the course.

"I really got a lot out of it," she said. "I would recommend the course to any councillor, whether they are brand new or have been doing it for 20 years. It was fun to do it and an easy way to learn."

The first of the six parts was titled "Where Does The Time Go." It has basically a time management theme, helping the students identify where time is spent, whether or not they think the time is well spent, and how to budget time for the best results. Part two was dubbed "Assessing Your Municipal Machinery: How It Works." That section outlined basic internal structures, including committees. Students were required to assess strengths and weaknesses and to determine whether their council was using the techniques that were being taught or whether they had found better ways of dealing with situations.

From there, it was on to the section called "What's Up Next." That section delved into subjects like meeting effectively, handling delegations, identifying policies and determining what percentage of the time the policies are enforced. All of the above were specific to the particular council the student was involved with. The effectiveness, completeness and format of staff and committee reports was examined and the kind of things that go on agendas were studied. Part four was entitled "Your Budget Process: As It Is, And As It Should Be."

"I had to outline the specific steps followed in our municipality, the various stages and how it (the budget) is implemented," Peel said. "It was really relevant. It helped a lot."

For Peel, part four of the course came at the most opportune time, when council was working on the budget for the year. "Your Planning Process" was the fifth section of the course. It was also specific to Laxton. Peel was required to take a specific property, outline the steps for re-zoning, learn the differences and similarities between subdivision designations, identify the different government ministries that must be involved in the severance/re-zoning process and do a cost analysis.

"I found that it turned out to be about $5,000 and one year to sever a lot from an A1 zoned property," she said.

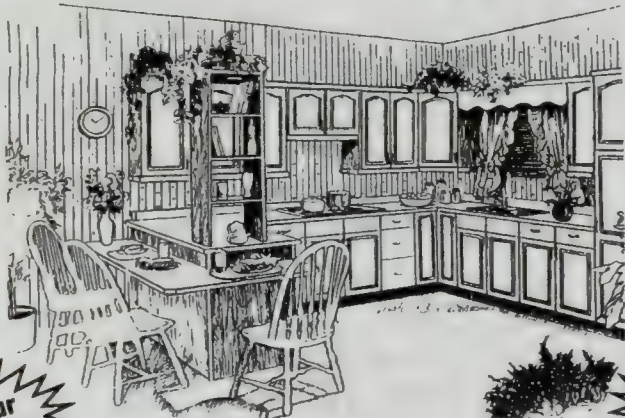

The final section of the six-part course was appropriately titled "You Haven't Finished: You've Just Begun. In that section, Peel had to prepare an action plan for her next year as a councillor. She had to outline changes she would like to see, how they would be implemented and when. The final exam consisted of one essay question from a choice of three topics and six short-answer questions from a choice of 10.

"It meant extra time (doing homework) during a critical time (when council was preparing its budget to fall within its goal of a zero per cent increase), but it was really worth it," Peel concluded. "There was a lot of interaction with municipal employees and I got to see first-hand how each element fits into the whole picture."

The fee for the course was paid for by the Municipality. Peel is one of just over 100 people who have graduated from the course since it was started in 1989.

Fun Days in Stanhope

Sunshine and a friendly, family atmosphere combined Saturday to make the Stanhope Fun Day a success. The day long event was filled with activities, displays and competitions, with just about everyone getting into the spirit of the occasion. The Fun Day was not held last year as Stanhope Township had special celebrations marking its 125th anniversary. Judging by the enthusiasm of the participants, the return was appreciated. Clockwise from the upper left, Cheri Rivard was among the Highland Dancers who performed: the tug-of-war was won by the Boshkung Lake team, who defeated the Halls Lake squad 3-2: Smokey the Bear joined members of the Stanhope Fire Department distributing gifts to youngsters: Sarah Rowden gets into the spirit of the day with a little facial touch up.

Brushing up on barbeque safety

Fires can flare when using improper or defective equipment

After this spring's cool weather, barbecue enthusiasts are anxious to get the steaks sizzlin' now. Fuel-safety experts at Ontario's consumer ministry have prepared some tips to help them enjoy a summer of safe barbecuing.

"Every year, propane - and natural-gas-barbecue fires occur," says Michael Philip, director of Ontario's Fuels Safety Branch. "The reasons vary. But by taking some simple safety precautions, people can avoid most of these mishaps."

To start off on the right foot, Philip says consumers should purchase only barbecues that carry the approval stamp of the Canadian Gas Association, Canadian Standards Association, Underwriters' Laboratories of Canada or Warnock Hersey Professional Services Ltd.

Models that haven't been approved by one of these organizations may be made for foreign markets with different fuels than ours, or they may simply not have been tested for safety at all.

Whether the unit is old or new, it should be thoroughly cleaned with hot soapy water before it's used for the first time each season.

Don't tamper with the air shutter at the base of the burner without referring to your owner's manual for instructions or to a qualified service person if necessary. You should also check often for any obstruction of burner tubes and ports.

Spiders and other insects love to build webs and nest in barbecues, so it's possible a unit operating perfectly one day may be dangerous the next.

Burners must be removed for cleaning. Use a stiff brush to clean a cast-iron burner or a cloth and soapy water for a stainless steel burner. A thin wire can be used to open clogged burner ports. Make sure the burner is seated properly at the gas valves when you replace it.

If you notice after cleaning there's still a poor flame or no flame at the burner ports, suspect an obstruction and turn off the cylinder valve immediately.

Other signs of blockages include a flame in the lower part of the burner assembly, a propane smell or a high-pitched whistling noise. If any of these symptoms is present, turn off the cylinder valve and have your barbecue checked by a service person registered with the Fuels Safety Branch.

Check the fuel hose for leaks frequently. This is a very simple test that takes only a couple of minutes — well worth the time when you consider that a minor leak in a propane hose can cause a 20-foot blast of flames if ignited.

To test for hose leaks, first connect the fuel supply to the barbecue. Then mix up some dishwashing liquid and water — at about the same strength you'd use in the kitchen. With a small brush, paint the solution over all the connections and the hose. Open the barbecue lid, leave the barbecue valve closed and turn on the cylinder valve. If bubbles form, you have a leak. Close the cylinder valve and tighten all the connections before testing again. If the leak persists, call in a branch-certified repairer.

Keep a plastic bottle of soap and water solution near the barbecue so you'll remember to check for leaks on a regular basis.

The final item to check is the propane cylinder, which, by law, must be taken to an authorized dealer for retesting every ten years. The date of manufacture or the re-test date will be found clearly marked on the cylinder collar.

Also, check the condition of the rubber "O" ring in the cylinder connection and replace it if it's cracked or out of shape. When connecting the cylinder, tighten the fitting — which has reverse threads — snugly, but not too tight. Overtightening can crush the "O" ring.

Finally, every time the cylinder's refilled, use some of your prepared soapy-water solution to test all fittings. If bubbles form, reconnect the fitting and test it again.

When transporting your propane cylinder, keep it upright at all times. Don't put a cylinder in a closed vehicle — block open the trunk or open all the windows in the passenger compartment.

Cancelling cod a tragedy

The moratorium on northern cod fishing imposed on all Newfoundlanders this month by Fisheries Minister John Crosbie is a tragedy for all Canadians.

The reverberations go far beyond the catastrophic consequences for the 20,000 people immediately put out of work and their families, to the many more whose services will be indirectly affected by the layoff and to all Canadians who treasure the rich cultural diversity of the Canadian mosaic.

But it would be a greater tragedy if we failed to recognize the painful lessons that must be applied to many other sectors of society like the forest industry, hydroelectric megaprojects, mining operations, aluminum, pulp and nuclear industries, coal burning plants and so on. These are some of the expensive lessons we've gained:

- Our ignorance about the natural world that sustains us is vast, so everything we do ought to be done cautiously and conservatively. The two-year moratorium on cod fishing is based on sheer guesswork.

- The fact is, we simply don't know enough about the biology of the northern cod to "rehabilitate" the species or to predict what will happen when the fishing pressure is off. We have to back off and hope nature can do it for us.

- Everything is interconnected. We cannot even pretend to "manage" a wild species so long as it's done piecemeal. Inshore and offshore fishing, bottom dragging, seine nets and long lines, Canadian and foreign fleets, capelin, seals, whales, industrial pollution, soil erosion and oil spills all impact on northern cod. We have no mechanisms to deal with cod as a biological entity in an all encompassing way.

- In attempting to mitigate human suffering, we must keep the long term fate of northern cod as the highest priority. They must not be held hostage to human economic, political and social needs as we see being done with threats by fishermen to continue fishing to get more money.

by David Suzuki

Nature cannot be shoehorned to conform to our priorities, demands and jurisdiction. The natural regenerative capacity of the cod stocks, not jobs or economic pressures, must determine the fishing seasons and catch limits to which we must then adapt.

- Management of resources must be ecologically based. Fish do not recognize borders that delineate our provincial or international territory, they are distributed according to their biological needs.

Everything under the ocean surface is not homogenous and infinitely self-regenerating. Massive drift nets and heavy dragnets pulled along the ocean floor disrupt whole communities of organisms and their habitats and ought to be stopped.

- Technology even in resource extraction sectors like fishing and logging, have become too large and powerful for natural systems to absorb their impact and replenish themselves.

We must learn to deliberately curtail the use of such technologies to protect the integrity of ecosystems and "harvest" fish at levels that are readily replenished.

- Conventional economics cannot be allowed to dictate our policies because it's emphasis on growth and maximal short-term profit is inevitably destructive.

Sustainable yields may generate much lower immediate returns on investment but unlike the stock market, can be maintained in perpetuity.

We can not control nature

- Politicians respond primarily to voters which is a rather limited constituency. Immediately after the moratorium on cod, Newfoundland Premier, Clyde Wells, explained his province's helplessness: "We have seven votes out of 300 in the House of Commons."

But how representative is government? Women rightly point out that elected politicians do not reflect their proportionate in the population. The same is true for visible minorities, aboriginal people, the poor or working class. Instead, excess representation of business and law skew government preoccupation towards economic or jurisdictional matters.

Furthermore, if politicians respond to the electorate, who speaks on behalf of those who can't vote? At the Earth Summit in Rio, Holland was the only country to name a child as an official delegate.

Holland must be congratulated, but why didn't all countries have child and youth delegates? Our generation is a mere moment within a historical continuum linking all of our ancestors with all generations to come. Who weighs our current actions against the past and all the still-to-be-born of the future?

And who speaks on behalf of the northern cod, whales, seals and capelin that are so interrelated? Who represents the trees, air, water or soil.

If we don't learn from our mistakes and tragedies, then we are truly doomed to repeat them.

Today, as the planet's biosphere careens into the future, we can't afford to ignore the costly lessons.

Mammal maps need manpower

The Atlas of the Mammals of Ontario is a volunteer-based project designed to determine and map the past and present distribution of our 85 wild mammal species. Naturalists, hunters, trappers, fishermen and other outdoor enthusiasts are providing records of their observations. Data gathered during the Mammal Atlas will be of benefit in providing a benchmark distribution of each species. The data can be used to show changes in distribution, determine conservation needs of species, prepare status reports on selected species and provide information for environmental impact assessments.

The Mammal Atlas is co-sponsored by the Federation of Ontario Naturalists and the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters and financially supported by the Ministry of Natural Resources, the Environmental Youth Corps and the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters. Technical facilities for the project are being provided at the University of Waterloo.

Anyone can take part in the Mammal Atlas, from people who can identify well known species such as the Striped Skunk or Black Bear, to the experienced mammalogist who can tell a Pygmy Shrew. Volunteers can invest as much time as they wish, from recording what they see incidentally, to actively surveying one or more 10 X 10 km squares.

For Atlas purposes, the province has been divided into 50 regions each with a Regional Coordinator (RC). Instruction manuals and data forms are available from your RC or Mammal Atlas office. With these materials, you will be able to start contributing your observations to the project.

Cigarette smuggling hurts economy

*Such a small thing. You slip across the border into the U.S., buy a couple of cartons of Canadian cigarettes and smuggle them back home again. Or you buy cigarettes from someone who is selling them at unbelievably discounted prices.

What's the big deal about trying to save a few dollars on some cigarettes? It's not doing anybody any harm, right? Wrong!

You may not think of it at the time, but when you smuggle or buy from a middle-man selling smuggled cigarettes, you are committing a crime.

That's not only a big deal, but cigarette smuggling is such big business that it costs our economy big money — an estimated $500 million a year in lost tax revenue. That's money that could be used to pay down the deficit or benefit Canadians in other ways, whether they be east coast fishermen, prairie farmers, low income families, etc.

And it's a growing problem. Smoking smuggled cigarettes is increasing to such an extent that one estimate says 20 percent of all cigarettes consumed in this country are illegally imported.

Of the cigarettes exported to the United States, it was estimated last year that approximately 80 percent are smuggled back into Canada.

The Federal Government, in cooperation with law enforcement agencies across the country, is undertaking a number of measures to combat the problem.

In April, for example, National Revenue Minister, Otto Jelinek, announced an agreement with cigarette manufacturers that will see identification codes on cartons and improved markings on packages to better identify cigarettes for export. Tobacco manufacturers have already started putting those markings on packages which will soon be available in stores across the country. The ID codes will help law enforcement agencies track smuggled product.

Minister Jelinek has also announced his intention to increase maximum fines for criminal smuggling offences from $25,000 to $200,000.

To further intensify customs operations against smuggling, Minister Jelinek announced on July 16 several new initiatives designed to target the casual smuggler.

The new enforcement package includes about 90 additional enforcement personnel dedicated to anti-smuggling activities and 45 new state-of-the-art "Detector Kits" to be used at Canadian border crossings. The new kits contain several devices including the "Buster" which detects drugs, tobacco products and other contraband hidden inside roofs, walls and floors of vehicles. Customs has also purchased 10 new X-ray machines to be used to scan incoming postal shipments.

Minister Jelinek further announced that, as part of a public awareness campaign, anti-smuggling posters and flyers will be distributed to Customs offices across the country.

These latest measures will build on the success of the government's current program to combat smuggling. Over the first five months of this year, seizure actions by Canada Customs at the border increased by more than 130 percent compared to the same periods last year.

Tobacco seizures by Canada Customs and the RCMP to the end of June total more than 8,300 and represent duties and taxes evaded of more than $9.2 million.

"The message is plain and simple. Smuggling is a crime," says Jelinek. "Penalties are severe, and with high-tech detection equipment and additional personnel, the chances of being caught are much greater today than they were yesterday."

So before you make that simple trip across the border, you should know the rules as well as the consequences when you are caught smuggling.

You are allowed... If you are an adult and are outside Canada for 48 hours or more, than you are entitled to bring back one carton of cigarettes and one litre of alcohol duty and tax-free.

If you spend less than 48 hours out of the country or want to bring back more cigarettes or alcohol, you are not entitled to an exemption and must pay duty and taxes.

Failing to declare any goods not covered by the personal exemption means severe penalties, including heavy fines, the loss of your cigarettes and alcohol, the possible seizure of your vehicle and possible prosecution.

For smugglers, the combination of new technology

J. Howard Society president elected

Fenelon Falls resident John (Jack) Wallace, was elected to the position of President/Chairperson of the Victoria/Haliburton branch of the John Howard Society at their annual meeting held in Lindsay on July 17. John has been involved with the Society since 1987, and has held the position of treasurer since 1989. He worked as a Guidance Administrator with the Scarborough Board of Education and although retired, continues to teach counsellor training at York University Graduate School on a part-time basis. He is also involved with the Fenelon Falls Curling Club and Sturgeon Point Golf Club.

Other executive positions include Zita Devan of Lindsay, vice-chairperson, Brad Secker of Fenelon Falls, treasurer and Joe Fry of Dunsford, past-president. Jack Wallace and executive-director, Paula Osmok, both recognized the significant contribution made by Mr. Fry during his tenure at president. He saw the branch through a major growth period as well as the purchase and renovation of Thirty-One Peel Street, which now houses the Society, the Canadian Mental Health Association, Adult Protective Services and the Community Literacy Centre.

First round in lawn bowling play-offs finish

The third week of June play-offs for the first series of games were held.

The winners of the quad series were Cy Heal, Vi Howell, Annie Hurtt and Neil Cartwright. The runners up were Ross Farr, Ruth Flatt, Eleanor Crane and Bill O'Brien.

May Sinclair, Hal Burton and Cliff Green were the winners of the treble series. The runners up were Vi Howell, Verna Wagg and Ed McKay.

Thanks to the tournament organizers and the judges. A second series of games has now started.

Consider consequences before buying bargain priced tobacco products and additional personnel means there's a better chance of being caught than ever before.

In Canada...

You should also consider the consequences of buying smuggled cigarettes.

When cigarettes are offered for sale in Canada at bargain rate, they may well have been smuggled in by organized crime. Profits from this illegal activity are used to finance other crimes — drug smuggling, prostitution, etc.

Other than price, how will you know you are buying illegal cigarettes?

Cigarette manufacturers have agreed to print on the sides of cigarette packages for export, "Not For Sale in Canada". Cigarettes bought at duty-free shops will have printed on the sides of their packages, "Duty Not Paid in Canada".

Cartons will carry identification codes that will make clear they were for export and not for sale in Canada.

Smuggling is a crime. Smugglers, be they organized criminals or the mom-and-pop variety, impact seriously on the Canadian economy.

Through the new enforcement measures, the Federal Government is demonstrating how seriously it deals with smugglers.

Good tips for great eats

The barbecue should never be used indoors, under a building or less than one metre (three feet) from a window, combustible wall or other potentially flammable surface. Also, cylinders must always be stored outdoors - not in a garage or shed.

Now you're finally ready to start cooking. Always make sure the barbecue lid is up before the fuel is turned on. Also, check that the source of ignition is lit before you start the barbecue manually.

Propane is extremely flammable and because it's heavier than air it can build up in the bottom of your barbecue. Igniting the barbecue could result in a "small" propane explosion that could cause injury or fire.

When you've finished cooking, turn off the valve on the cylinder before you turn off the barbecue flame controls.

For further information on propane safety, consumers across Ontario can ask for a copy of the new video How to care for your propane appliance, available in English and French from the Oakville office of the Propane Gas Association of Canada Inc., at (416)827-8505.

To receive a free copy of the consumer ministry's brochure, Living safely with propane appliances, contact the consumer Information Centre, Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations, 555 Yonge Street, Toronto, Ontario M7A 2H6. Call (416) 326-8555 in the Toronto area. From other parts of the province call toll free 1-800-268-1142. Special visual equipment for use by the hearing impaired is available at (416) 326-8566.

Legion in birthday bash

July 1 Canada Day 125 was one great night at the arena when the legion marched with scouts, guides, cubs, brownies, highland dancers and the cadet corps affiliated with Branch 129 led by the pipe band from Haliburton. The applause made you proud to be a Canadian.

There was an excellent turnout from Minden branch for the Zone Drumhead service at Coboconk. Someone was watching over us, the rain held off until after the parade. It was another delightful day. The draw for the bicycles was held and the winner for the ladies was Pat Thomas from

by Georgina Deeks, Public Relations

Tweed.

Wing night at Minden legion was a great success. Thanks to all volunteers involved. Coming events are as follows:

August 1 - Spaghetti night, price $6.00, tickets on sale at bar

August 15 and 16 - County Fair

Let's have a good turnout for the parade, legion dress if possible. Time will be posted in Minden Legion. Also, help needed at the hospitality tent, if you can give some time, please call Ross Codlin 286-2786 or leave your name at the bar. Thank you.

A speedy recovery to Comrade Reg Hart who is at present in Toronto General Hospital and our best to Dee Hisson in Minden Hospital.

That's about it for now, Comrades, enjoy each sunny day as it passes.

Rent control guideline set at 4.9 percent

The rent control guideline for 1993 will be 4.9 percent.

The 4.9 percent guideline is the first to be calculated under the new Rent Control Act, and is a reduction from the 1992 guideline of 6 percent.

The guideline is the amount by which a landlord can increase the rent for a unit once each year. Most tenants in Ontario receive a rent increase no greater than the guideline.

The guideline is based on increases in the costs of operating rental housing averaged over three years. These operating costs, of which property tax is the largest portion, accounts for the 2.9 percent of the guideline figure. The guideline also includes 2 percent to cover the cost of repairs to the building.

In some cases, landlords may receive an increase of up to 3 percent above the guideline for necessary, legitimate repairs or for very high increases in utilities or property taxes. To receive an above-guideline increase, a landlord must justify the costs at a rent control hearing.

The Rent Control Act was passed by the government in June, and takes effect on August 10, 1992.

By August 10, the Ministry will have reorganized its offices and procedures to administer the new system. Until then, the current rent review system remains in place.

Applications submitted prior to August 10 will be dealt with under the temporary rent review legislation.

TSW water levels

The reservoir system of lakes in the Haliburton area have not seen large declines in water levels over the past week.

The average percent of full capacity stood at 83.0% on July 13, only 1.6% lower than a weeks ago.

Releases of stored water have been cut back to near minimum flow in the major tributary rivers.

The Gull River for example presently has a discharge of only 14-15 cubic metres per second compares to a normal of 19.5 cubic metres per second for July.

The outlook would seem to be one of moderate to below normal losses from the lakes mostly attributed to below normal temperatures and timely showers which have allowed the TSW to maintain levels at or above normal for this time of year.

Voters are fighting back

Old party allegiances no longer sway votes

In 1932, the Honourable Ernest Lapointe spoke about the Legislative function of Parliament. "Sir, the legislative function is to formulate what is and what should be the law of the country. The function of the Executive Cabinet is to carry out the laws formulated by Parliament. It is Parliament that has the power to decide what the law is and what the law should be. It is Parliament that has control of the treasury,... It is the only effective agency in any British House of Commons for controlling the departments (Ministries) of Government. The goal of democratic government is the satisfactory understanding between those two branches of Government."

If we use the words of Ernest Lapointe as a guide to what Parliament should be and how it should function we have little choice but to conclude that the system that presently exists bears no relation to the ideal that he put forward. Parliament is now nothing more than the effective rubber stamping of the decisions made by a select few people who surround the first minister. Whether one looks to the House of Commons in Ottawa or to the Legislative Assembly of Ontario it is clear that the people's voice is no longer heard in Parliament. Parliament as an institution is not dying, it is dead.

The Ontario Legislature has recently been the scene of a number of incidents that highlight this fact particularly well. Those who watch the daily unfolding of the Legislative saga will avow that the last two years have been fraught with acrimony and considerable antipathy. On the one hand, the Government Members firmly believe that the Opposition is committed to obstructing every measure that they attempt to put forward. On the other hand, the Opposition Members are convinced that the Government is trying to stop them from performing their responsibilities as an effective Opposition. Both views are accurate and that's the problem. Neither side is willing to work in good faith.

An example of this lack of good faith is the rule changes that were brought in recently by the Government. The Government called the rule changes "Parliamentary Reform". Rather, they were rule changes that were designed to make it easier for the government to pass its agenda. Many of the changes are indeed found in other jurisdictions and many of the changes make sense, but, the Government surprised the Opposition with a unilateral move that effectively poisoned the atmosphere of the House for weeks.

Drainville Diary

A report from Queen's Park

With Dennis Drainville, MPP

If the government was truly interested in Parliamentary Reform we would attempt to deal with a whole range of issues including: the function of Legislative Committees, the role of Private Members, and most importantly a revision of the doctrine of Part Discipline.

It should be noted that when the other parties were in power they were not willing to deal with these substantive issues either. It seems that once a Government, any government, is elected they are unwilling to change the status quo regarding the use of power.

What are the citizens of Ontario to make of this parliamentary debacle? The cynicism and negativity that is palpable everywhere regarding politicians is reaching a crisis point. The people recognized a long time ago that something was critically wrong with Parliament. They understand that unchecked power is being exercised by a handful of people and that the Members that they elect have little or no say in how decisions are made. They are beginning to fight back. The old party allegiances are gone. More and more people are changing their support to "fringe" parties or to independent candidates. And who can blame them?

The present actions and exchanges in the Legislature are not only disrespectful of the institution but they are fundamentally a repudiation of the very people who in good faith put us there. I for one cannot blame them for saying to all of us, "A plague on both your Houses."

Cottage life in the 1940s

Remembering the welcoming pines and ventilated privies submitted by Art and Nellie Kerr

Yes! We heard nature calling us. We had had a month of honeymooning on Opeongo in the Park with a tent, a $25 canoe and good health. The mystic magic of the call of the loon by night seemed to say "Put down your roots in my country."

So in summer 1940, we headed to Muskoka. The glamour of the luxurious estates seem to have faded. The shore lines had been slashed. Grass was being groomed. Concrete was replacing the granite. The lake winds seemed to be rejecting our canoe. We said, "NO!"

We drove on to Dwight and Dorset. Our nostrils detected the exciting scent of pine. The inviting scenes of quiet lakes welcomed us. There was room to breathe. Carnarvon could be our "Capital City".

In the spring of 1941, enquiry at Lands and Forests in Maple told us that cottage lots were being surveyed at the south-east end of Kushog Lake. We wasted little time. Hal Burton, at the store, said

"Yes, just at the west of the town lot." The dirt road beyond the Crooked House was single file, and hilly, with 80 degree corners. As it turned to the north at Ron Reid's, it curved over bare rock on the hillside. It was a low gear climb. By Buck Slide bridge, we had seen no sign of survey.

Returning to the hilltop, we found the slashed trail leading to the west. Following that for a few minutes brought us within sight of the sparkling blue of water. It had to be Kushog Lake! We copied the numbers of the survey stakes. This could be our home. The pines seemed to whisper "Welcome!"

We returned to Maple. The parcel of land was offered by License of Occupation at $4.00 per year. We would be required to erect a cottage, valued at $1000, within a year. We accepted (in 1946 we purchased the acre of land).

In July 1941, we floated $50 worth of lumber across the bay from the rocks by the shore. With the help of a friend, our 8 foot by 14 foot cottage was occupied within a week. Our $25 canoe even carried an ice box across the water. It was a summer of ever-changing activity. Our three year old son blossomed into a young handy man. By August, he was just another duck on the bay. Nellie was quite vigorous on the other end of the cross-cut saw. Experience has been an excellent teacher.

We learned about fire in that first summer. After the first week, we bought a tiny wood stove. It meant comfort when an 80 degree P.M. became a 40 degree A.M. Once we had burned some brush on the beach, where we had cut it. Two or three days later we saw smoke oozing up 15 feet back of where we had burned it. A pine root? If we had been in town?

We had running water within three weeks. An old tub sat on a 5 foot platform at the side. A couple of buckets of water a day, hoisted into the tub, gave water to the inside basin. But plumbing today makes it easier!

The "privy" was ventilated. A 2 inch maple limb nailed between a hemlock and a birch, 50 feet inside the bush, did nicely. The flush mechanism was a pail of ashes and a tin can. B.Y.O.P. (bring your own paper).

Drinking water came from the lake. It was cleaner to the eye than the springs that (more on page 44)

New rent system for crown lands

Natural Resources Minister Bud Wildman recently announced a new formula for moderating rent increases for private leases and other rentals of Crown land.

The new rent formula will apply to a wide range of private leases, including: recreation camps, such as fishing or hunting camps, which are popular in northern and central Ontario; summer resort leases; and cottage leases in provincial parks.

"This new formula will moderate the rent increases leaseholders were facing up to now," Wildman said. "Proposed rent increases up to now have reflected the idea that rent for private leases on Crown land should be developed from market value of those properties and that could have led to significant increases for some lease holders."

The principle under this market-value policy is that rent should be between five and 10 percent of the market value of a property. MNR adopted the market value approach in 1983. Since then the ministry has been moving towards implementation of market value rents for Crown land tenancies, including leases for cottage lots in provincial parks and more recently recreation camps as well.

"In recent years, the increases in rent payments needed to achieve market value have been relatively moderate," Wildman said. "This year, we have had new market-value assessments made on high-value leases. In some cases, average rent increases of as much as 200 or 300 percent were proposed and increases in a few cases exceeded 600 percent to reach a market value rent."

"We have decided to moderate the rate increase in order to avoid causing any economic hardship to renters," Wildman said.

The new formula for moderating rents calls for yearly increases of 15 percent or $100, whichever is greater until the rent based on market value is achieved.

The change will be retroactive and apply to rent adjustments made since September, 1990, which means that in some cases leaseholders will receive a credit for the rent they have paid the province in excess of this formula.

Technically, in terms of the province's market value policy, this change means that the province will forgive a portion of the rent increase that would have applied to a lease had it gone ahead with achieving market value immediately.

The new formula for moderating increases will not apply when a lease changes hands. In that situation, the rent will be set for the new tenant between five and 10 percent of the market value.

Some broad examples illustrate how this formula for moderating rent increases will apply. In Algonquin and Rondeau provincial parks about 600 private leaseholders faced average increases that could have raised rent to $4,000 a year from the current rent of $1,000. Now, these rents will increase to $1,150 for the first year of the new lease and at the rate of 15 percent in each subsequent year.

In northern Ontario, the leaseholders of about 1,500 hunting and fishing camps and similar types of recreation camps have already had rents increase to $500, $750 or even $900 a year from about $100 a year. Now, the increase in these cases will generally be about $100 a year from September 1990. In these cases, the tenants will receive a credit for the extra rent they have paid up to now. That credit will be applied to future rent payments.

For all the private leases and other rentals of Crown land, rents will be re-evaluated every five years in most cases and properties will again be re-appraised to determine the market value. That new market value figure will be used in determining the future rent for the property.

"By offering tenants this staged approach to increasing rents, we are also providing them an opportunity to plan their household budgets so they can prepare for subsequent increases," Wildman said.

"I am pleased to be able to announce today this approach to moderating the rate of rent increase on Crown leases and to provide leaseholders with a fair and reasonable formula for setting rent increases."

Purple plague whacking wetlands

Beautiful but deadly weed is slowly taking over

Two teams have been charged by the Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters (OFAH) to slow the deadly spread of purple loosestrife into Ontario's wetlands.

The teams are spending the summer along the Bruce Peninsula and eastern Ontario, using mechanical control methods to stop what has been called "the purple plague" by wetlands biologists across North America.

Purple loosestrife (Lythrum salicaria) is a European plant that invaded North America more than a century ago, but started to explode across the continent in the past decade.

Loosestrife is estimated to be responsible for the death of nearly one million acres of North American wetlands annually, as it displaces all native plant species and slowly drains already diminishing wetlands.

The three-metre-high plants, known for their beautiful purple blooms, leave a wetland nearly devoid of life. Only bees and redwinged blackbirds will use a wetland that has been dominated by loosestrife, while other species are left homeless.

"There's little question that there's no time left to wait," said Dr. Terry Quinney, OFAH provincial coordinator of fish and wildlife services. "The plant has spread so rapidly across Ontario over the past few years that it's time for proactive action."

Quinney pointed out that nearly every species of plant, insect, fish and animal in Ontario rely to some degree on wetlands.

"We've lost approximately 75 percent of our precious wetlands to unsustainable development," he added. "Purple loosestrife represents a killer disease poised to devour what little wetlands we have left."

The teams will be protecting vital wetlands from the seed transmission of nearby loosestrife-infested areas. Every plant annually releases 2.7 million seeds.

In addition, plants in areas already infested will be removed, depending on the local ecology and the maturity and density of the plants.

A series of public workshops and events will also be staged to show people how to control the loosestrife on their properties, and how to avoid spreading the species. If successful, the program could expand to include the entire province in 1993.

In recent years, the OFAH has put the species on the environmental map through proactive lobbying and public education. Last year, an OFAH campaign led to bylaw passage in approximately 50 municipalities, declaring the plant locally noxious.

Project Purple is financially assisted by the Shimano Sport Fisheries Initiative and the Environmental Youth Corps.

The teams are operating with the cooperation of the Grey Sauble Conservation Authority and the Saugeen Valley Conservation Authority (Bruce Peninsula), the Lower Trent Region Conservation Authority and the Prince Edward Region Conservation Authority (eastern Ontario).

The Ontario Federation of Anglers and Hunters is Ontario's oldest and largest conservation organization, and a leader for the preservation of Ontario's wetlands.

Purple loosestrife eradication and control

General Rules:

- Purple loosestrife (Lythrum salicaria) is easiest to hand pull at 1/2 years of age; otherwise, plants may have to be eased out with forks to get all roots. Take your time pulling roots, it is important to get them all.

- All cutting and hand pulling must be completed with extreme care, making sure all plant parts are gathered and disposed of.

- Avoid cutting plants late in the summer, when the species has gone to seed. You could spread seeds and do more harm than good.

- Make sure to clean off your equipment, boots and clothing before leaving a site. You could unwittingly be transporting minuscule loosestrife seeds.

- Loosestrife is available for sale. DO NOT BUY IT! Even sterile hybrids could be fertile.

Purple loosestrife eradication and control

- 1) Small area (less than 0.5 ha), with a few scattered plants (less than 20) - hand pull/dig

- 2) Small area (less than 0.5 ha), with more plants (more than 20) - hand pull/dig, or cut to prevent seed spread.

- 3) Larger area (more than 0.5 ha), with a few scattered plants (less than 20) - hand pull/dig or cut to prevent seed spread

- 4) Larger area (more than 0.5 ha), with more plants (more than 20) - cut to reduce seed spread

Either place plant parts in plastic bags and place in a sanitary landfill site, or else burn them.

Wear your seatbealts

Hospitalization and rehabilitation costs for motorists injured while not wearing seat belts are twice that of users, according to the Ontario Ministry of Transportation.

Statistics show that wearing a seat belt reduces the risk of serious injury and the likelihood of being thrown from a vehicle during a collision. A survey conducted by Transport Canada indicated that although the number of people who are buckling up has risen, almost one in five drivers still does not use a seat belt. So buckle up for safety's sake.

If you have a question that needs answering or require help with an application, contact your nearest Information Centre for assistance.

Heaven on earth

we knew then.

Milk for the table and our young son, was supplied by Mrs. Oliver Stevens, fresh from the cow. She was only a 15 minute paddle away. We brought our own pail.

Hospitality at the neighbouring farms was genuine. Mrs. Bert Harrison (Elinas) asked us to come over for a chicken dinner in August. Bert and his two brothers had been cutting "mash hay" in the wetlands for the last three days. They had not returned by dusk for the dinner. By lamplight, the dinner was served. Shortly, the click of the wagon wheel on the rocks was heard. The men came in. Three rifles were stashed in a corner. They splashed in a bit of water. They joined us at the table. Not a word was spoken until the plates were empty. Then we heard of the cattle, the deer, and the early forest. We were, and are, honoured to have been one of the family.

In April 1942, dreams of the cottage were put aside. I enlisted. We next saw the cottage in July 1945.

A bit of heaven on earth.

CARDS OF THANKS

Thank you to everyone who helped make the Legion sponsored Blood Donor Clinic a great success. 223 units of blood were collected. Thanks to the donors; the Haliburton IGA and Valumart for their generous donations of supplies and refreshments, the ladies of the Eastern Star and Branch 129 Ladies Auxiliary for the homemade cookies; all the volunteer workers and phone campaigners, the Legion Pipe Band; Br. 129 L.A. President Kay Wylie for her invaluable assistance and organizational skills and the L.A. members who worked so cheerfully and tirelessly. A record collection was made this year. Let's get ready to break this record next year.

Gerald Irish
Chairman - Blood Donor Clinic

The first Seniors Exhibition of the Festival of Arts and Crafts held on the weekend of July 4th and 5th, 1991 was a great success and our grateful thanks are due to the 61 talented exhibitors and assistance of all the volunteers during the time of the show. The expertise of Councillor Jeanne Anthon, Doreen Berry, Jean Stevens and the acting administrator of the Agnes Jamieson Gallery, Irene Lubowitz was very much appreciated.

Thankfully appreciated was the support and expertise of our Senior's Committee: Co-chairman Jean Lacey, Esther Lee (Weaving and quilting), Mary Cox and Irene Fuhr (sewing, knitting, crocheting), May Bradbury (Rug Hooking), Cliff Scott, (Woodcarving and wood-working), Lorraine King, (our secretary and painting) and our Treasurer, Ruth Rice.

There were approximately over 600 visitors who donated financially to our show, some from British Columbia, Alberta, Nova Scotia, New York, Windsor, Parry Sound, Kirkland Lake and Sudbury.

The contributions by the Minden Legion #636 and their ladies auxiliary are also very much appreciated.

I know the Great Architect of the Universe must be fully gratified by the talent that has been created with much love and devotion for the showing of all these arts and crafts.

God bless you all for such a wonderful show.

Thankfully,
Nancy Gayton, Co-Chairman.
